This biannual learning is being organized in 2023-2024

Teacher(s)	Guiderdoni Agnès ;Smeesters Aline ;
Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Prerequisites	Prerequisite : basic knowledge of modern history.
Main themes	The lecture course is tailored to a diverse audience; we shall either examine essential themes (the book, the Reformation, the Great Discoveries, education, the return to Antiquity, etc.), or illustrious personalities (Petrarch, Poliziano, Erasmus, etc.), which will reveal different facets of humanism: a movement that sought to come to terms with the important transformations in what one knew about the world and the human being. The course will likewise show humanism's contribution to the different areas that now make up the Faculty of Philosophy, arts and Letters (history, philology, literature, art, etc.).
Learning outcomes	At the end of this learning unit, the student is able to : 1 Specifically, humanism designates the intellectual movement that restructured the image of the world and the conception of the human being in the Renaissance. The aim of the course is to study the elements that allowed and favored the emergence of such a movement, and to study the ways in which this movement attained a lasting influence.
Evaluation methods	A written exam (3 hours) with multiple-choice questions (1/3 of the score) and an open question about a document.
Teaching methods	The lecture will be given in turn by the two teachers. Several additional speakers will be invited to present some specialized issues.
Content	The notion of "humanism" will be put into question in the light of the most recent research, which enable a new definition and a new understanding of the field. After addressing some terminological issues (what is meant by "humanism" and "Renaissance"), the course will start with a chrono-geographical survey outlining the main stages of humanism in the leading European countries. Several modules will then focus on a range of concrete issues and important concepts attached to the definition of humanism: for example, humanisme and the use of Latin, humanist pedagogy, religious issues, the development of exact sciences, humanist philology, Neo-Latin and vernacular literatures. Some specialised lecturers will also be invited.
Other infos	Course materials : a selection of reading material and a basic bibliography will be given at the beginning of the course.
