THEO2M1 - Information

Learning outcomes

The Master 60 in Theology aims to provide the student with more in-depth training to that received during the bachelor's course. It is aimed at students who have received basic training in theology (generally on the bachelor's course). In the various fields of theology, the student is invited to tackle a specific topic linked to significant current issues in a more in-depth fashion.

Teaching method

The programme is designed in such a way as to promote an interdisciplinary approach to theology. For one, the syllabi for the course activities allow for interaction between teaching and research, which should help students acquaint themselves with research in the various fields of theology. For another, in the same fields, the interdisciplinarity is structural: for example, biblical exegesis links philology, history and literary theory; dogmatic theology and ethics draw on philosophy, the history of thought and various human sciences; pastoral theology is based on sociology, anthropology and psychology.

Learning set-ups and teaching strategies: the specifications for course activities foresee variety in terms of teaching styles, depending on which method is the most apt when it comes to the theological discipline in question and its own methodology. The fact that, as far as most activities are concerned, specific issues are envisaged allows for a case-by-case study which brings together a rich diversity of knowledge and skills.

Evaluation

The evaluation can be carried out chiefly in the form of a traditional oral or written exam and written work with a formative evaluation. For each activity, the modes of assessment are laid out in the specifications. For seminars, a formative evaluation is foreseen.

Possible trainings at the end of the programme

Accessible masters: possibility to complete the training as part of the Master 120 in Theology.
