Introduction

Teaching profile

Learning outcomes

To introduce students whose core program does not come under the competence of the faculté de psychologie et des sciences de l'éducation to the basics of these disciplines. The aim of these disciplines is to look at human behavior and the minor should make the student more aware of the special features of the scientific study of behavior, with its biological and socio-cultural roots. It should also give the student an introduction to the wide range of areas covered as well as the diversity of methods employed.

Admission

Students of all faculties are welcome. To begin with, the minor in discovering psychology and education is restricted to 25 students. Admission is dependent on the agreement of the conseiller aux études (course adviser) of the student's core program and the examination, by the faculté de psychologie, of his/her personal training plans. When s/he enrolls, the candidate will attach an application letter. This letter is to be addressed to the conseillère aux études (course adviser) - Murielle Sack - by 31 August at the latest.

Possible trainings at the end of the programme

Regardless of the major to which it is linked, the minor does not give access to any of the master's courses organized by the faculty, nor, a fortiori, to corresponding professions.
