Teacher(s)	Frasca Eleonora ;
Language :	English
Place of the course	Bruxelles Saint-Louis
Main themes	Migration and mobility, both from outside the EU and in the form of the free movement of citizens within the EU, are high on the EU's political agenda. These are controversial issues that divide Member States as well as national public opinions. The aim of the course is to provide students with an understanding of interconnected and often contentious issues in these rapidly evolving areas. The course explores the dynamics of migration and mobility in the EU, including the different types of migration – regular and irregular migration, free movement of EU citizens, asylum – and the primary developments in contemporary border control and security practices. From an interdisciplinary perspective, drawing on political science, law, economy, and sociology, it examines the rationale of migration policies, politics and law, combining a theoretical and practical account of the field. The course also delves into the challenges of the Schengen area and analyses the so-called “migration crisis”.
Learning outcomes	At the end of this learning unit, the student is able to : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• understand the actions taken in the fields of migration and mobility at the European level (main achievements, rationale and challenges)</li> <li>• understand the importance and difficulties of coordination between EU institutions, EU agencies and national authorities</li> <li>• understand how migration and mobility policies impact and are impacted by the perception of migrants</li> <li>• critically examine the human and political implications of bordering regimes and technologies</li> <li>• critically analyse current events in the field of migration policies, politics and law, including from a human rights perspective</li> </ul>
Evaluation methods	The examination for this learning unit includes both the assessment of graded practical exercises (40%) and a final oral exam (60%) . The grades for the practical exercises will carry over to the August session (resit).
